See-Through Protection

Hurricane Rated Polycarbonate Panels

For most of us living in the United States, June marks the start of summer. For folks in the southeastern part of the states, it also marks the start of hurricane season. Protecting your home's windows and doors is very important if you want to minimize storm damage.

Most storm protection systems are made from metal or wood which tend to be heavy and block natural light. This is where the Hurrigal storm panel is a great option! This translucent polycarbonate panel is lightweight, easy to install, and extremely durable — all while allowing views to the outdoors.

José, from Tampa, Florida put the Hurrigal panel to the test last year. Previously, he had used metal shutters. "They were heavy and not easy to handle. I needed assistance with them before and after the storm. The polycarbonate panels were very light, easy to handle, and I installed them myself."
